The status of gas drilling

By Norm Stemple

The following information was sent to me by Bob Manthei of XTO Energy about drilling for natural gas and future production in the Mistletoe Heights area:

"At this time we have formed two units, and have drilled one well in each.

The B Unit is the one that extends south to Windsor, east to Eighth Avenue, and west to Forest Park.

"All of Mistletoe Heights is currently in this unit.

"We have two options for the gas line: the original route along Interstate 30 and the second one going north from the location to a line near Lancaster. We expect the line construction to take about 12 to 18 months.

"The royalty checks will be dependent on this construction and gas sales, so they are at least 18 months away."

I sent an e-mail to Manthei asking specific questions. His answers, as of Nov. 17, are as follows:

Will other wells be drilled from this site in the near future?

"Our current plans are to drill more wells. We do not have any planned on our current schedule, which goes to June of 2011. This schedule is subject to change."

Does the "fracking" occur after the gas transmission line has been completed?

"This depends on the lease agreement. We prefer the gas line to be in place, but this is not always the case."

Is the delay in completing the gas transmission line waiting for city approval? Why so long to complete?

"The delay is a combination of city approval and private rights-of-way agreements."

You say the B Unit extends west to Forest Park. Is this Forest Park Boulevard or the river?

"Based on the map I have, it is the eastern boundary of Forest Park."

As I understand it, the fracking extends about 300 feet to each side of the main horizontal drill hole. Is this correct?

"Seismic data gathered during fractures indicate that fractures can extend between 250 and 300 feet."

Note: As of Nov. 18, the rig has been removed from the pad site.

The 2nd Annual Mistletoe Heights Porch Tree Contest

Last year we had about 40 beautifully decorated porch trees in Mistletoe Heights, this year we hope to triple that number. Be part of creating this new tradition. Some neighbors might even drop a secret Santa gift under your tree. Your porch tree will help unify our historic neighborhood's holiday decoration. One neighbor is going to the country to cut down some Texas cedars. It's a lot of fun looking at all of the trees. Decorate a Hanukkah bush or a big pagan fir. Last year cookies were left under all of the porch trees in the neighborhood. Decorating has officially begun...

Go green: Waste not at holiday time

In the United States alone, an additional 5 million tons of waste is generated during the holiday season, says the Clean Air Council. Four million tons of waste is attributed to wrapping paper, shopping and gift bags.

"If every American family wrapped just three presents in reused materials, it would save enough paper to cover nearly 50,000 football fields," according to the Stanford University Recycling Center.

When most of the homes in Mistletoe Heights were built, unwrapped presents were simply placed under the tree when children were sleeping. See what greener choices you and your family can make this year. Fill stockings with gifts, reuse gift bags and boxes and wrap gifts in pillowcases with ribbon.

Yard of the month: 1138 Clara St.

Phyllis' gardening tip: Remember to keep plants well watered during winter months, too. Plant roots are still growing although the plant may appear dormant.

1633 Park Place
Fort Worth, Texas 76110

(817) 923-2282

Congratulations to Phyllis and Rod Green, recipients of Mistletoe Heights' Yard of the Month citation for December.

The landscape of this Prairie-style home at 1138 Clara St., built in 1919, is ablaze with color. Autumn amethyst encore azaleas, with dark lavender blooms, lustrous green summer foliage and attractive purple winter foliage, play the starring role by providing year-round vibrant color and interest in the Greens' garden.

Although the azaleas were planted about 10 years ago by the home's previous owners, Phyllis has lovingly tended them for the past nine years. She feeds the plants each spring with a fertilizer, specifically for rhododendrons, and waters regularly, especially during prolonged dry spells.

"I think of the encore azaleas as similar to the ease of growing knock-out roses," Phyllis said. "Once established, encores require minimal care and continue to perform beautifully, even in our tough Texas Other plants in the bed include antique roses, purple oxalis, coneflowers, ajuga, pink Turk's cap and various salvias, all suited to sun and partial shade and with prolonged blooming throughout summer and fall seasons.

Although she has been an avid gardener most of her life, Phyllis quickly admits that she is still learning. "I don't worry too much about garden design," she said. "I just plant what I love and try different things. Now I'm researching ornamental grasses, and I plan to add those, too."

Phyllis' love of gardening extends to friends and neighbors as she shares plants and gardening ideas and to students and their parents at Lily B. Clayton Elementary School. She volunteers weekly with the school's Outdoor Club for third- to fifth-graders who are interested in learning about native plants and animals as well as beautification of the grounds at Sweet Lily B.

Thanks, Phyllis and Rod, for your gardening efforts and for helping make Mistletoe Heights a great place to live! Thanks, too, to Calloway's Nursery for the generous donation of a $50 gift certificate to each Yard of the Month recipient.

Cultivate a Christmas cactus

By Patsy Slocum

The Christmas cactus gets its name because it usually blooms in December and January.

The plant comes from the Brazilian rain forests and can be grown either as an upright or hanging plant. The hanging flowers are dark red, with several rings of petals. The plant's root network is weak and can't stand too much water.

In the spring, it needs some light, but not direct sunshine. It needs to be sprayed in hot weather with plenty of water and requires some nourishment. It needs a rest in late July and August, and it must be kept completely dry to promote the growth of buds.

By fall, water sparingly but spray frequently. When the buds emerge, water the plant more. It likes a cool temperature, and shouldn't be moved or turned or be subjected to changes in temperature, as the plant may shed its buds.

After flowering, it needs to rest for a couple of months, and must be kept dry, in the light and in cool temperatures.

Happy gardening!

Dealing with urban coyotes

Neighbor Melissa Kohout spotted a pair of coyotes in Newby Park at around 2 p.m. on a recent Saturday. They can sometimes be heard serenading the neighborhood at night.

So please be cautious, especially if you have small pets.

The DFW Wildlife Coalition says urban coyotes live and thrive in nearly every city across the United States, including the Dallas-Fort Worth Metroplex. But the sight of a coyote in an urban environment takes some people by surprise and sometimes makes them nervous.

The good news is that biologists who study coyotes say they pose no threat to people – as long as we behave in a way that allows coyotes to stay wild. So there's really not as much to worry about as some news stories would have us believe.

What to do and what not to do

- Never intentionally feed them.
- Avoid leaving out food sources that can attract coyotes:
  - Clean up around overflowing bird feeders; bird seed on the ground attracts mice and rats and can attract coyotes.
  - Don't leave dog or cat food outside overnight.
  - Clean up rotting fruit under fruit trees.
  - Don't leave small pets outside unattended – particularly at night.
  - Obey leash laws; small dogs on the loose can attract coyotes, particularly at night or early morning.
  - Keep garbage containers closed and inaccessible. Adding ammonia or pepper spray to trash can discourage rummaging by wildlife.
  - Keep compost in enclosed bins rather than in open piles. Compost should be covered in brown materials so the piles don't attract animals.
  - Don't place garbage cans out until morning; many animals are active at night.
- Don't invite coyotes to build dens next to your home; seal crawl spaces, close sheds, thin brushy areas and seal off access under decks.
- Even if you enjoy seeing coyotes, don't let them know it. Be a threat to keep them wary of humans -- and safer. If a coyote visits your yard, wave your arms, shout and spray it with a water hose. A coyote afraid of humans is much safer to share our cities with.
- Contact the DFW Wildlife Coalition at 972-234-WILD (9453) if you spot a coyote. Hotline volunteers will provide information and complete a coyote sighting report, which is forwarded to Fort Worth Animal Control and Texas Parks & Wildlife, as part of a DFW Metroplex-wide coyote tracking initiative.

Tips for winter night walking

- Separate yourself as much as possible from traffic by seeking out lighted sidewalks. In parts of the neighborhood the sidewalks drop out, be sure to be walking in the street facing traffic, and only when you have no alternative. If you walk with your back to oncoming traffic you cannot be sure you are seen. You need to be able to see and react to any vehicle.
- Drivers are not on guard for folks walking at night. When crossing at any intersection, including traffic lights, ALWAYS ASSUME THE CARS DO NOT SEE YOU. Wear reflective tape, light colored clothes, carry a flashlight, and always take extra caution. Keep in mind there are many more drunk drivers during the holiday season and pedestrian vehicle accidents happen mostly at intersections.
- Mistletoe Heights has not been pro-active as a community, nor has the City of Fort Worth, as it should be in fixing its sidewalks. Many of our sidewalks are dangerous in the daytime, let alone after dark. Tripping hazards, uneven sidewalks, tree roots, potholes in our streets and toys left on sidewalks - all can lead to a slip and fall. Walk with your eyes noting the ground 15 feet ahead to see upcoming hazards.
- For use older folks, we gradually lose our ability to see in the dark and recovering from headlight glare can take more time. Choose a walking route where you won't have frequent changes in the lighting level. Do not look into oncoming headlights.
- Don't blast music as you walk at night, as you are less able to respond to vehicles, notice trip hazards or suspicious persons.
- And for those neighbors who wish to be kind to others, please do not block the sidewalk with your vehicle. You might not be aware that you force walkers into the street.
- Carry your cell phone, and try to let someone know your route and if you see a person who seems suspicious, go in the other direction and call the police. 911. Trust your gut.

Mistletoe Kids Coloring Page

Crime incidents increase

For the neighbors who are in denial about how much of an up tick in crime we are having here in Mistletoe Heights here are the stats from Oct. 1 thru today.

We have had 12 serious crimes! Often returning to the same home or block within hours. They are equally occurring on both sides of Forest Park, so those that think its not on "their side" are seriously mistaken. These stats do not include recent gang graffiti that has been seen as well in the neighborhood.

The "we really don't have any crime mantra" just is not helpful at this time. I spent 15 years on a big block in downtown Brooklyn with a lot less crime than this.

These are the stats with police reports. Consider that some folks might not have called. Please always report a crime because it helps the police know where to keep their officers.

Please pull your car into the driveway past the facade of the house, use your locked garage, use locking gates, lock your doors and windows, shred your mail, and report anything suspicious to the police. Do not give out your name or information to strangers. People selling something just might be looking to see who is home and who is not.

Criminals like to return to where they have been successful. Do not leave bags, extra keys, ID, sunglasses, phones, and packages in your cars. Do not leave bikes, expensive yard equipment and tools in the yard or porch. Leave lights on timers, and a radio turned to a talk show or a TV left can be a real deterrent. Most criminals do not like dogs much either. Use quality locks and install cameras tied to the web. These new cameras are cheap and can be very helpful to the police.
